Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

As a scientist in Medicine, my analytical skills are well honed by observing how humanity has progressed in its ability to acquire new data, synthesize hypotheses, and go about proving them valid or not. Information technology allows great sophistication in data collection, and one must recognize the relevance of data to the problem, the strength of the data in its collection with attention to freedom from distortion or bias, and the limitations of statistical analysis in proving differences between data sets. Much of the challenge in Medicine from my viewpoint is judging the quality of the conclusions that are drawn from data of variable strength.

In my practice of Medicine for the decade prior to retirement last year, my task was to admit to the hospital acutely ill individuals of both generally good health and those plagued by chronic disease (up to twenty medications a patient), with no fore knowledge of their medical condition. This on the spot crisis analysis required interview and exam of a new acquaintance, with simultaneous use of both clinic and hospital databases in the ER to identify problems and potential solutions. The use of consulting opinions of other physician specialists is routine, as is rapid lab and imaging acquisition. This analytical process was capped by the generation of coherent documents reflecting a synthesis of all data into a treatment plan subject to peer review, hospital and insurance regulations, and the judgment of the patient and family who must be satisfied by my lay translation of its benefits and risks.

Finally, in recreation I analyze soccer games as an adult and youth soccer referee. This is a fast paced version of my day job where near instant judgments are based on thorough understanding of the rules, combined with observation of multiple player activities and information of the assistant referees while running at variable speeds.

It appears that I like tasks that demand intense focus.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

My pathway to impartiality in a process, a characteristic not naturally endowed to humans, has been a struggle to ignore my prejudices, strive for empathy with how people involved feel about the outcome, and participate in the most transparent way possible.

As a physician, impartiality in assessment of various treatment plans as my service to the patient suggested I would do best by giving as much information as needed (but not so much as to cause fear), recognizing that emotions involved with difficult decisions influence how people deal with them, and being professionally content with whatever decision was made at the end of the process.

As a soccer Referee, the appearance of impartiality is critical to the satisfaction of players and spectators. This is most importantly demonstrated in applying the rules as consistently as humanly possible. Giving information to players and coaches in a transparent manner helps enforce their understanding of my justice. Folks will tolerate the disappointment of loss much better if they understand what and why things happen to them.

Critical in the ICRC creation is a level playing field, the prime task of the first eight commissioners. Despite best efforts, there is likely to be a demographically asymmetric applicant pool of cultural significance that may not be corrected by the blinded auditors. Thus the randomly chosen eight must address the consequences of this bias risk by balancing the commission to reflect Austin's diverse stakeholders. Failure to do so will raise a credibility issue in the outcome of the ICRC process.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

Unlike our flat landed Texas metropolitan brethren, Austin geography guides growth with profound effect on demographics. The craggy hills lie west of the escarpment and limit density of development enhancing value and demand. The plains east are cost effective for industry and housing densely. People migrate to where the cost of living fits their socioeconomic needs. One needs only visit the various HEB stores about town to witness the change in demographics, which must look interesting on maps of population density the ICRC might use.

Nature set this delightful stage for our town, and attracted people of education, industry and vision who wrote the script of a multifaceted economy attracting citizen actors from all over the world. My last physician appointment was at North Austin Medical Center working with staff and clients from Africa, Asia, and Europe complementing past generations of Texas settlers hispanic, white, and black. It was an intellectual smorgasbord; such a treat given my passion for soccer and curiosity about the culture behind those interesting accents.

And a river runs through it. Carving our hills into a pearly chain of lakes and canyons where we enjoy our diversity together in a scene of beauty and peace. What a great place for a melting pot!

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

I think you can tell where I'm coming from.
I'd be honored to serve.
Thanks for helping!

GLOSSARY

- "Bundle" means to raise money as an intermediary for a council candidate by soliciting contributions on the candidate's behalf.
- "Campaign committee" in regard to an "officer, employee or paid consultant of a campaign committee" means a candidate or a specific purpose political committee supporting or opposing a candidate.
- "Candidate" for elective office means a person whose name appeared on a ballot, or who was a declared write-in candidate, in a general or primary election. It does not mean a person who merely announced a candidacy or only filed campaign finance filings. This definition attempts to construe the term against ineligibility, avoid ambiguity and disputes of fact, and use the term in the way most commonly understood by a lay person.
- "City" means Austin.
- "City elective office" means the office of mayor and city council member.
- "City employee" means an employee on the City payroll, including a temporary or part-time employee. The term does not include an independent contractor. This definition follows the definition in Section 2-7-2 of the City Code.
- "City office," with respect to appointment, means a municipal court judgeship (including a substitute judgeship), and membership on a commission, committee, board, task force, or other City body appointed by the mayor or the city council. This definition follows the definition of "city official" in Section 2-7-2 of the City Code, excluding those City officials who are covered separately as City employees.
- "Community college or university in the City of Austin" means a degree-granting post-secondary educational institution, accredited by a recognized accrediting agency under the Education Code, that grants one or more of the following: an associate's degree, a bachelor's degree, a master's degree, or a doctorate, and that regularly conducts classes where the instructor and two or more students are physically present in a physical location within Austin's city limits.
- "Contribution," for purposes of calculating aggregate contributions to candidates for City elective office, includes all contributions to candidates for mayor and city council, and contributions to specific purpose political committees supporting or opposing those candidates.
- "County" refers to a county in which the City of Austin has territory.
- "County elective office" means an office that is voted on county-wide or an office that is voted on by the voters of a precinct drawn by a commissioners court.
- "Employee" with respect to a political party or campaign committee means a person who was paid a salary by the political party or campaign committee.
- "Local lobbyist" means a person required to register under Chapter 4-8 of the City Code.
- "Non-competitively bid contract" means a contract which must be awarded as provided in Section 252.043 of the Local Government Code ("lowest responsible bidder" or "best value for the municipality").

- "Officer" with respect to the "campaign committee of a candidate for elective state, county or city office" means:
  - the campaign treasurer of a candidate for an elective state, county, or city office;
  - the campaign treasurer of a specific purpose political committee that supported or opposed a candidate for an elective state, county, or city office; or
  - an officer or director of an incorporated specific purpose political committee, incorporated for liability purposes only under Section 253.092 of the Texas Election Code, that supported or opposed a candidate for an elective state, county, or city office.

- "Officer" with respect to a political party means a precinct chair, a county chair, or a member of a party executive committee under Title 10 of the Texas Election Code.

- "Paid Consultant" with respect to work done for a political party or campaign committee means a person who was paid monetary consideration for providing legal services, accounting services, public relations services, statistical or polling services, or political or campaign-related services or advice.

- "Paid Consultant" with respect to the three year ban on paid consultancy with a council member, means having a "political or professional contract" with a council member as defined in this guidance.

- "Political or professional contract," in the context of a contract with a council member, means a contract with a council member under which, in return for consideration, a person provided expert advice or personal services related to a council member's duties or to the council member's service as a council member, or provided advice about the conduct of campaign activities or holding office, or provided services to a council member that would be reportable on the council member's required campaign and officeholder filings under Title 15 of the Texas Election Code; Article III, §8 of the Austin City Charter; or Chapter 2-2 of the Austin City Code. This does not include a contract solely for the sale of goods.

- "Political party" means a political party that appeared on the ballot in any of the last three general elections for state and county officers.

- "Professional contract," in the context of a contract with the City means a non-competitively bid contract other than a contract solely for the sale of goods.

- "State" means Texas.

- "State office" means an office held by a "state officer" as defined in Section 572.002 of the Government Code.
  - In the context of an appointment to a state office, "state office" means: the office of Secretary of State, an office of a state agency subject to appointment for a term of office specified by the Texas Constitution or a statute of this state; an office subject to appointment with the advice and consent of the senate; the position of executive head of a state agency; or a state office subject to election but filled by appointment because of a vacancy or because the office is newly created.
  - In the context of candidacy or election to a state office, "state office" means a seat in the legislature, an executive or judicial office filled in a statewide election; a judgeship of a court of appeals or of a district court; membership on the State Board of Education; or the position of district attorney or criminal district attorney.

- "Student" means a person actively enrolled in a community college or university on the date of the person's application to the Commission.
