DISTRICT THREE

A WINDOW IN

Emma S. Barrientos Mexican American Cultural Center
October 12, 2015

Along with his wife and family, Adrian Quesada is a 15-year resident of District Three. Raising his two daughters there, Adrian had a desire to work with the youth of the district to document the energetic creative culture of the area, while at the same time bringing accordion legend Johnny Degollado in an effort to bridge the generational gap. As a window into the community of the district, Adrian has produced a song with an accompanying video featuring a cross section of students from District 3 schools and the Anthropos Music program. The song will also feature established District 3 residing musicians and will bridge the generations and cultures that reflect the change and growth of the district.
