

Community and Project Team Meet and Greet December 15, 2015 Event Recap

On December 15, 2015 the City of Austin Parks and Recreation Department and the Austin/Travis County Health and Human Services Department, in partnership with design consultant McKinney York Architects, hosted a Community and Project Team Meet and Greet to launch the design phase of the Montopolis Recreation and Community Center Project. The evening was an opportunity for the community to get to know the consultant team in an informal setting, gain an understanding of the project timeline, and share their input on the facility's early design stage. The event was held 6:30PM – 8:30PM and was attended by 58 community residents and project team staff.

To help the design team understand what residents want the new center to feel like when they walk through the doors, attendees were asked to participate in an Adjectives Exercise (Attachment 1). The exercise asked attendees to review sets of adjectives with matching visual examples grouped on seven boards then rank their preferences as first, second, and third choices. The fourth choice was for the adjective they strongly believed should not be associated with the new facility.

For those who could not attend the event, the Adjectives Exercise was made available online in English and Spanish until January 15, 2016 on Speak up Austin, the online community listening tool listening tool for the City of Austin. An English and Spanish paper version of the exercise was also available at the Montopolis Recreation Center front desk (Attachment 2). The community was also invited to make comments by calling Austin 3-1-1, the City of Austin services line.

The results from the adjectives were collected and weighted depending on preference.

The words most liked were:

- Innovative
- Balanced
- Easy-Going
- Humble
- Respectful
- Energetic
- Adventurous

The words most disliked were:

- Hip
- Formal
