Dear Ms. Alter et al.,

I am writing to express my concern and displeasure at the current Code Next plan. Not only is it extremely difficult to decipher what the changes are, it strikes me as extremely arbitrary. I do not think it wise to increase density without planning for increased road usage. This is Texas. You cannot tell me that the extra people you move onto my street will not be using a car. I resent the social engineering you are attempting to accomplish by making it even more crowded on the roads. If you want more people to use mass transit, then make mass transit more attractive and usable! I vote No to Code Next! I will actively campaign against city officials who engage in social engineering.

Respectfully,

Susan Dyer
